

This is an aerial view of the middle reach of the Muddy Hollow Creek during the summer of 1997. Trees are depicted here as having fallen across the creek. Many of the trees that are falling are dead or dying.

Live alders

Dead alders still standing